Amna Cameron is the N.C. Department of Transportation's deputy director of strategic initiatives and program support. Cameron served as the lead staff to the NC FIRST Commission and co-authored the Commission's report. Prior to joining NCDOT in October 2018, Cameron spent 13 years working in various capacities in the North Carolina General Assembly Fiscal Research Division including serving 10 years on the transportation team. She received a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from The University of Wilmington. She has a Master of Public Administration from Western Carolina University.