Jamie Crumley
Founder and CEO
Harpley's Meat Packing

Jamie Crumley is the Founder and CEO of Harpley's Meat Packing, which she established in 2021 and has grown into the largest woman-owned beef processing company in the United States. Under her leadership, Harpley's has emerged as a significant contributor to the cattle and beef processing industry and was recently recognized by the Triad Business Journal as the third-fastest-growing company in the Triad.

Beyond her leadership at Harpley's, Jamie serves as Vice President of the American Association of Meat Processors (AAMP) and is among a select group of industry leaders advising the USDA, White House, and federal policymakers on issues affecting the U.S. cattle and beef processing industries. She is a strong advocate for independent meat processors, American cattle producers, and strengthening the nation's domestic beef supply chain.

An attorney by training and an accomplished entrepreneur, Jamie brings extensive experience in business development, operations, and scaling companies. She also founded the Harpley's Helps Foundation in 2024, reflecting her commitment to supporting farmers, families, and rural communities. Through Harpley's and its community partnerships, she has helped provide millions of protein-rich meals to North Carolina families.
