A wise person once said, “Mommy, all the good stuff is in Charlotte.” That wise person was my 5-year-old son, and he was right on. Greetings people of the Queen City!

I’m Page Fehling and if you’re an insomniac, the parent of a newborn, or just a bleary-eyed lover of local morning television, I was your early bird best friend for the past seven years on Good Day Charlotte. Now... if you (like me) have learned to enjoy a solid sleep-in, a morning workout (unlike me... but at I still do ‘em!), and getting your news at a far more humane time from an excessively tall soccer mom... well... then... we’re still besties. Phew. We just meet a bit later in the day now, on the ALL NEW FOX 46 News at Noon and 4 p.m.!

I grew up right outside of Washington, D.C., but have lived in North Carolina for almost 20 years. My stint in the Tar Heel state began... well... as a Tar Heel, at UNC-Chapel Hill. I “played” softball my freshman year, but quickly decided to leave the softball to ladies with skills far superior to my own and concentrated on something I was better at: talking into a camera.

I graduated with a journalism degree and then spent two years in the Peace Corps in Honduras digging latrines. My life took an only slightly more glamorous turn when, upon completion of my Peace Corps service, I moved to New York City to wear navy blue polyester and make barely enough money to live on Ramen noodles as an NBC Page (yes, I was “Page-the-Page”).

During that time I also met the man of my dreams over a “Dumb and Dumber” movie line quote-off. It was love at first sss...slippy...slappy...swanson...SIGHT. Love at first sight. Sorry, I knew it started with an ‘S.’ Fast forward to today... and now I’m in love with three men and one woman. But I’m married to one of them and gave birth to the other three, so that’ll teach you to jump to conclusions. Part-time hosting and reporting jobs in New York led to a full-time gig at WNCN in Raleigh and then here to FOX 46 Charlotte!
