Peyton Gardner

Student
North Carolina State University

Peyton Gardner is a senior double majoring in Horticultural Science and Public Relations. With experience as a writer for the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, a communications and farm audit intern for Kornegay Family Farms and Produce, and most recently, the internal communications intern at BASF, she offers a unique perspective as an emerging agricultural communicator and student. Being dually enrolled in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and the College of Humanities at NC State has shown her the opportunities that are possible with interdisciplinary work. This inspired her to join the effort in creating the Ag Communicators Program (ACP) last fall so that students interested in pursuing a career in Ag Comm can receive support and industry-specific training otherwise not offered on campus. Along with her work with ACP, Peyton is also the President of Club Clogging at NC State, Vice President of Public Relations Students Society of America, an Agriculture Future of America Ambassador, a Thomas Jefferson Scholar, and a John T. Caldwell Fellow Scholar.
