Dr. Danny Hamrick

Instructor of Political Science, Guilford Technical Community College Senior Research Affiliate, Duke Global Value Chain Center

Dr. Danny “Dayne” Hamrick is an instructor of political science at Guilford Technical Community College (GTCC) and a senior research affiliate with the Duke Global Value Chain Center (Duke GVCC). He previously worked as a monitoring and evaluation specialist at RTI International and as a research analyst at Duke GVCC, conducting global value chain analyses for clients including the U.S. Department of Defense, the World Bank, the Organization of American States, and USAID. His work has focused on agriculture, medical devices, global health, and the competitiveness of North Carolina firms in the global economy.

Hamrick holds a Ph.D. in sociology from North Carolina State University, where he used the GVC framework to examine the development potential of niche products, particularly geographically indicated alcoholic spirits. He also earned a master's in International Studies from NC State and a B.A. in Spanish Language and Literature, with minors in Global Trade and Commerce and Latin American Studies, from Wake Forest University.
