Dan McLawhorn joined the Raleigh City Attorney's Office in August 2003. His practice areas are environmental law and sustainable and renewable energy projects. The environmental law practice includes advice to the Public Utilities Department for wastewater treatment and water supply with an emphasis on nutrient impaired waters; advice to the Stormwater Division; and advice regarding hazardous waste contaminated properties.

Mr. McLawhorn retired from the Attorney General's Office for the State of North Carolina in 2003. From 1998 to 2001, Mr. McLawhorn served as general counsel of the NC Department of Environment and Natural Resources.

Mr. McLawhorn was elected chair of the Lower Neuse Basin Association and the Neuse River Compliance Association in 2009 and he continues in that position. He served on the N.C. Rules Review Commission from 2007 until 2011. His activities with the N.C. Bar Association have included a term on its Board of Governors and serving as chair of three sections and two committees.

Mr. McLawhorn earned his J.D. from the University of North Carolina School of Law in 1974 and his B.A. from Davidson College in 1970.
