Chief Wellness Officer
Wake Forest Baptist Health

As the medical center's first chief wellness officer, Dr. Satterwhite is one of its leaders in redesigning health care to be more proactive about health and wellness rather than reactive about sickness and disease. He develops value-based, customized integrated solutions for self-funded employers -- including Wake Forest Baptist Health's employees -- designed to improve their overall wellbeing in convenient, cost-effective and health-effective ways. This includes mobile and onsite clinical practitioners performing a variety of preventative and wellness services and programming, as well as sick visits, chronic condition monitoring, worksite injury and occupational medicine services. He uses his health law expertise to design solutions that comply with the myriad of legal requirements that encase the delivery of healthcare. He is responsible for the departments of BestHealth for Business which includes Corporate Health, Executive Health, Occupational Medicine, and BestHealth for Us (the internal wellness department). He joined Wake Forest Baptist Health in 2015.
