

Environmental Compliance Conference

FEBRUARY 5, 2020 | RALEIGH, NC

Emily Sherlock
Attorney
Robinson Bradshaw

Emily Sherlock practices both environmental and corporate law at Robinson Bradshaw. She regularly advises clients on compliance with state and federal environmental regulations, including those governing hazardous wastes, underground storage tanks, and emissions from non-road engines and equipment. She also represents clients in negotiations with environmental agencies to resolve alleged violations of such regulations.

Emily has experience serving as common counsel to a large group of potentially responsible parties at a contaminated site, including negotiating with the state agency to resolve the PRPs' liability and negotiating settlements between the PRPs. She also has experience negotiating Brownfields Agreements on behalf of prospective developers redeveloping contaminated property.
