Mohan Valluri
Executive Vice President
Alamance Foods

Mohan Valluri is Executive Vice President of Alamance Foods, a North Carolina-based food and beverage manufacturer. He leads operations, engineering, innovation, commercial strategy, and business transformation, with a focus on translating consumer needs into products that can be manufactured at scale.

With a background in engineering and cross-functional business leadership, Mohan connects consumer insight, product innovation, and manufacturing execution. His work spans dairy and beverage innovation, manufacturing modernization, and partnerships that help retailers, brands, and foodservice operators bring new concepts to market. He has helped shape AFI Labs, the company's innovation and commercialization center, bringing together culinary expertise, consumer research, product development, and process engineering to bridge the gap between concept and commercial production.

Mohan holds a master's degree in Electrical Engineering from Clemson University and serves in industry and academic advisory roles focused on food, manufacturing, and sustainable sourcing. His broader focus is advancing accessible nutrition, practical sustainability, and long-term growth across the food and beverage industry.
